OHIO STATE LEGISLATURE IN SESSION

RELIEF FOR BELMONT AND ALLEN COUNTIES GIVEN

Ross P. Buchanan, of Carroll County, Author of the Compulsory Bible Bill, Tried to Force the Caucus to Give His Pet Bill Priority—Failing In This He Threatened to Run For Governor—Claims Kluxer Support.

Columbus, Jan. 15, (UP).—Admittedly fearing senate insurgents who all but bolted the senate caucus Thursday night, the Ohio general assembly convened at 9 a. m. today to enact emergency relief legislation for bankrupt and near-bankrupt taxing districts.

Whether the session would confine its procedure to the relief bill, as pledged, refusing consideration of "omnibus" and repeater measures, was shrouded in doubt as the chambers were called to order.

Contrasting conditions in the senate, almost complete harmony, interspersed by only a few malcontents, prevailed in the house.

An air of uncertainty permeated the senate where the ominous warnings of senate insurgents who may seek to prolong the session in violation of pre session pledges, were sounded.

The senate caucused for three hours Thursday night, accomplishing nothing except an agreement to caucus again this morning.

The house caucus brought more definite results, the solons voting 72 to 22 to enact the relief bill and voting down proposals to consider other legislation.

Before the chambers convened, senate leaders sounded out sentiment among the senators in an effort to pledge enough votes to insure passage of the relief measure and keep other legislation from being presented or recalled.

Enactment of the relief measure as emergency legislation, requires 87 votes in the house, but leaders were confident the majority would be easily mustered.

The house caucus overwhelmingly defeated the attempt of Representative Ross Buchanan of Carroll county, to bring up his Bible bill for passage over Governor Donahey's veto.

"I feel that if anything is taken up at this session it should be the Bible bill," Buchanan told the caucus, moving the representatives be relieved of their pledges to consider nothing except the emergency bill.

Representative Roberts, Mahoning county, seconded the motion which was defeated 67 to 11.

Buchanan then served notice he would attempt to bring up his bill when the house convened.

"If the bill is not acted upon, I will become a candidate for governor and make it an issue in my campaign," he asserted.

The house members also rejected a proposal to consider the passage over the governor's veto, of the Lipp bill which would take jurisdiction over employees of the public utilities commission from the state director of commerce and give it to the commission.

Similar attempts in the senate were voted down over protest of Senator Clark, Champaign county.

The emergency relief bill as approved by taxation committees of the house and senate, provides:

1. That interest and sinking fund levies above four mills may be placed outside the 15 mill limitation on petition of 51 per cent of the voters of a taxing district.

2. The deficiency now existing in county funds may be funded over a period of five years instead of having to be paid out of this year's revenues.

3. That five-sixths of the cost of compulsory real estate reappraisal may be funded over a five year period instead of having the entire cost paid out of one year's revenue.

4. That school districts, on petition of 60 per cent of the voters, may levy an extra three mill levy for school purposes.

Representative Robert A. Taft, Cincinnati, was elected speaker of the house succeeding former Speaker Harry D. Silver, who resigned.

Taft's election was opposed by the corn bloc which supported Representative J. H. T. Gordon of Logan county.

The vote was; Taft 80; Gordon 15. A majority of the Democrats did not vote.

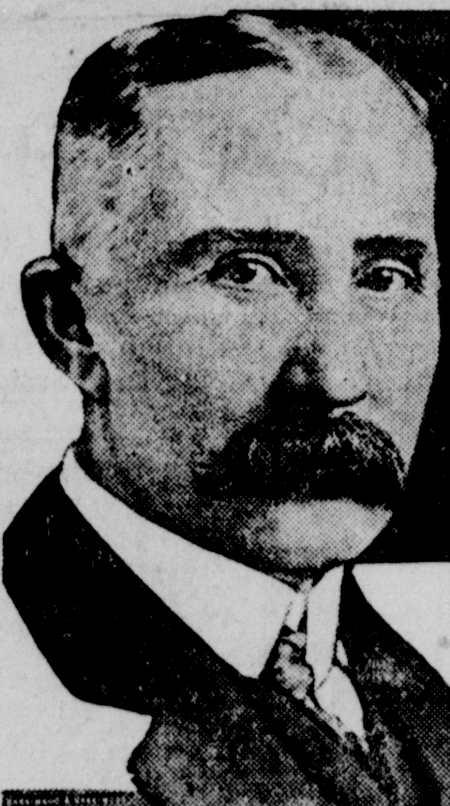

Taft formerly was majority floor leader and was serving his third term.

Immediately after the election of Taft, the emergency relief bill was introduced by Representative W. E. Baxter of Allen county, under a suspension of the rules.

The bill at once was referred to the taxation committee and the house recessed for half an hour while the committee prepared its report.

The Baxter bill passed by both house and senate today and has been sent to Governor Donahey.

HEADS FARM BUREAUS

After President Coolidge in his address before the Farm Bureau federation in Chicago declared against any farm legislation tending to price fixing and against radical revision of the tariff, his policy was severely criticized by S. H. Thompson of Quincy, Ill., president of the Illinois Agricultural association. Two days later Mr. Thompson was elected president of the Farm Bureau federation.

QUEBEC HOTEL MOST FAMOUS ON CONTINENT

Chateau Frontenac Overlooking the St. Lawrence River Burned Thursday.

Quebec, Canada, Jan. 15, (UP).—The old section of the Chateau Frontenac, winter tourist headquarters and one of the most famous show places of the continent, lies in ruins today.

After a ten hours battle in which four firemen were badly injured, the blaze, which started on the fifth floor of the structure and spread rapidly, finally was brought under control.

One by one the famous Colonial suite, which has been visited by thousands of tourists from all the world, the Canadian suite and the royal suite fell prey to the flames. Firemen were called back to safety when the copper roof, melted by the intense heat began to sag.

Dining and sleeping cars dispatched to the scene by the Canadian Pacific railroad took care of the overflow of guests who had failed to find accommodations in neighboring rooming houses. Many members of the Quebec legislature which now is in session were forced to go to Montreal for the weekend recess.

Early Thursday night when it appeared practically certain that firemen were facing a long battle with the flames, tourists from across the American border, travelers from overseas and other guests numbering approximately 400, began moving their effects from the hotel, accepting philosophically the inconvenience of seeking makeshift quarters.

In the new wing whose tower stood majestically over the smoldering ruins, elevator service was maintained thruout the night to aid the firemen in their battle.

Employees stood guard in the path of the flames ready to protect the lives and property of their guests should the fire spread to the new addition.

The loss has not been estimated.

Nickel in the Body

Among the metallic substances traceable in the human body nickel must now be included. It does not occur in the fats or in muscular tissue, but is found associated with keratin, the chemical base of hair and nails, and also in the liver.

R. W. Seyboldt of Defiance Shot at Sunrise in Salt Lake City.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Jan. 15, (UP).—In the gray light of early dawn, Ralph W. Seyboldt, Columbus, Ohio, convicted slayer of Patrolman David Crowther, was shot to death at the state prison today by a rifle squad.

Execution of the 23 year old prisoner followed vain appeals of fellow Ohioans and pastors of the local churches for commutation of sentence to life imprisonment.

Seyboldt faced the firing squad a few seconds before 8 o'clock. At 8:01 the command was given, the rifles cracked and Seyboldt crumpled in a heap. He was pronounced dead a minute later.

WEEKS BRIDE IS ACCUSED OF KILLING SPOUSE

This was Her Fourth Venture in the Matrimonial World.

Mrs. Laura Christy, 49, of East Liverpool, Ohio, bride of a week, was taken into custody here Thursday for questioning in connection with the sudden death of her husband, William, 56, an itinerant preacher, who died here Thursday night.

When arrested Mrs. Christy admitted her marriage to the minister was her fourth matrimonial venture. Christy, became ill suddenly Tuesday.

Coroner J. M. Van Fossan announced he would make a post mortem examination of Christy's vital organs, expressing the belief that poison caused the clergyman's death.

Mrs. Christy was arrested near the Ohio river bridge connecting East Liverpool and Newell, West Virginia.

According to the police, Christy carried $300 life insurance. Three hundred dollars Christy had on deposit in a bank was withdrawn by Mrs. Christy Thursday, they said.

Mrs. Christy denied any connection with her husband's illness and death. She was committed to the Columbiana county jail Thursday night awaiting grand jury action after she pled not guilty to first degree murder charge in connection with the death of her husband, Rev. William Christy, 56.

Christy was a representative of the United Christian Missionary Workers with national headquarters at East Akron.

Chief of Police McDermott preferred the murder charge after the woman he said, confessed to him and Prosecuting Attorney R. M. Brookes that she had administered poison to her husband, who died Thursday night.

According to Mrs. Christy's signed confession, she gave Christy the poison "because he asked for it." She said it was administered for indigestion.

A post mortem examination of the body is being made by the coroner.

ANNUAL

Convention of National Canners' Association.

Columbus, Jan. 14.—Approximately 75 per cent of last year's canning of sweet corn has been sold, according to estimates made by canners here today. The last quarter of 1925 broke all records for the consumption of canned foods and it is believed that the first half of 1926 will set a new mark for the use of canned products. Corn is one of the most popular of canned foods and the Ohio product has a national market because of its excellence. To be just right corn must be canned when it has the highest sugar content along with texture and consistency. To get the corn when it is at the right stage, and handle it promptly, canneries have been established virtually in the corn fields.

Ohio's leading corn canneries may be found in Clinton, Warren, Butler, Pickaway, Logan, Fayette, Franklin, Madison, Highland, Champaign, Huron, Ross, Greene, Van Wert and possibly one or two other counties.

Several hundred Ohio canners and food jobbers will go to Louisville on January 25 for the annual convention of the National Canners' Association and the meeting of food brokers and pickle and kraut packers. Louisville is preparing for 10,000 visitors.

All the officers of the Ohio Canners' Association will attend the Louisville meeting. They are: J. Warren Wood, President, Lebanon; J. I. Smith, Vice President, Circleville; Roy Irons, Sec'y-Treas., Clyde; and Arthur Hamilton, Lebanon; Howard A. Orr, Circleville; Harry McDonald, Elyria; James Stoops, Van Wert; and A. L. Sharp, Celina, directors.

PERSIA IS RULED BY HORSE GROOM

Headed Revolt Which Cleared Way to Throne.

New York.—From hostler in the stables of the Cossacks to shah of Persia has been the rise of Reza Khan Pehlevi.

From tender of the horses, Reza entered the Cossacks and in 1921 led the revolt which culminated in the overthrow of the government, the deposition of the shah, and his assumption of the role of dictator.

And now, advised from Teheran, the capital of Persia, say that on December 14 Reza ascended the throne. Meanwhile, Ahmed Kajar, the twenty-seven-year-old deposed monarch, is in France, moving frequently between Paris and the Riviera, and declaring that he still remains the ruler of his erstwhile realm.

"I am, and remain the legitimate and constitutional sovereign of Persia," declares Ahmed Kajar, "and I await the hour to return to my country to continue to serve my people."

The dashing Reza, despite his humble origin—he is the son of a Persian—is possessed of both strategy and statecraft. As soon as he became premier and minister of war, in other words, dictator, he began the reorganization of the country. At first he desired a republic, but he was thwarted in his efforts to establish one by the opposition of the priests. Then when the national assembly late in October proclaimed the deposition of the Kajar dynasty, Reza is said to have immediately set his heart on ascending the throne.

He brought about unification of the unruly tribes in a single entity and raised an army of 40,000 men. He saw that they were paid, fed and clothed, thus insuring to himself their loyalty when needed. Personal courage is said to have aided him materially in holding his troops in hand. When in 1921 the Khorassan tribe rebelled, Reza is declared to have gone personally into the rebel camp, killed the leader and put down the rebellion.

The Persian government, known as the national consultative assembly, has been retained by Reza to carry out his will in the manner of a constitutional regime. It is this body which it is believed has sanctioned his elevation to the throne.

KEEPING WELL

WHO SHOULD DRIVE AUTOMOBILES?
 DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
 Editor of "HEALTH"

WHEN you get on a railroad train and roll into your pullman berth, you go to sleep with perfect confidence in the intelligence and ability of the man at the throttle. You know that the engineer of a passenger train is sure to be a tried and tested employee of years of training and experience. You know that his eyes and his nerves and his heart have been examined and tested, that he does not befuddle his brain with whisky or drugs and that his ability to think clearly and act promptly in an emergency has been proven.

This was not always true. In the early years of railroad building, many accidents were due to unfit men in the engine cab. But gradually it was learned, often by costly mistakes, that the safe and successful engineer must be a man with keen and perfect vision and with nerves and muscles always under control.

But a new method of travel has developed in the last 20 years. There are today over 12,000,000 motor cars in this country. Traveling as fast as the average train, carrying every day many times more passengers than all the railroads put together, automobiles are today far more dangerous to life than railroad trains. This is shown by the large number of people killed every year by autos, as compared to the comparatively small number of lives lost by railroad accidents.

We are just beginning to realize that the same qualities of mind and body are required to drive an auto as to run a steam engine.

Before the World war, practical business men had a marked contempt for scientific men. They were all right in lecture rooms and laboratories, but they had no connection with every-day business matters. The physical and mental tests used in classifying and sorting the men in the draft opened the eyes of many captains of industry.

The other day the management of the Yellow Cab company asked Prof. A. J. Snow of Northwestern university to apply psychological tests to their 3,000 cab drivers to determine if any of them were unsuited for work as chauffeurs. Professor Snow used three tests to determine the mental alertness, rapidity of nerve and muscle reactions and sensory acuteness of these men. He reported that 18 per cent of the oldest drivers in the employ of the company were unfitted to drive cabs and should be given inside jobs or dismissed. The officials were skeptical and to prove that the psychologist was wrong, they checked up the record of each man. They found that the 18 per cent of drivers pronounced unfit were responsible for 48 per cent of all their accidents.

Do you know that the driver of the car in which you ride has keen eyes, steady nerves and muscles which act immediately to meet an emergency? If you don't, keep out of his car. Do you know that you are fit to drive a car yourself? If you don't, find out or let someone else drive.

Mercury Non-Magnetic

The bureau of standards says that mercury is one of the so-called non-magnetic elements and cannot be magnetized in the ordinary sense. As a matter of fact it is "dia magnetic" and when placed in a magnetic field carries fewer "lines of force" per unit of area than the space around it. The effect is very small, and very sensitive apparatus is necessary to measure it.

I find the actual to be far less real to me than the imagined. Why this singular prominence and importance is given to the former I do not know. TO BENEFIT THE FARMER

Much Interest Shown In the Grange Proposal of An Agricultural Day.

Widespread attention has been attracted to the project launched by the National Grange at its Sacramento session, for establishing an Agricultural Day, to be held in October each year, and designed to call to public attention the importance of the agricultural industry and the necessity for a better understanding by the public of the problems of agriculture, affecting both producer and consumers. Agricultural leaders in all sections of the country have expressed their hearty approval of the idea and it has also met a favorable response from the press as well as from those engaged in department work for agriculture, state and national.

The Grange idea of an Agricultural Day has no thought of adding another holiday to the list, which farmers consider altogether too long already; but rather the adoption of the Arbor Day plan, when the occasion shall be dignified by proclamation of the President and of governors, and provide chiefly for local observances under various organized auspices, to emphasize the great thought that "the farmer feeds them all."

It is believed possible through programs in the schools, by public exercises with appropriate programs, and by a general campaign of educational publicity, to carry to many people, especially in villages, towns and cities, who are now without it, information concerning the food supply of the country, the value of fresh, wholesome farm products, the actual cost of production and some of the knotty problems with which farmers have to wrestle. On the other hand in rural communities the thought of agricultural co-operation and of quality improvement will be stressed, while the outcome of the whole project is aimed at disseminating information looking towards a better balance between consumers and producers, affecting both production and distribution along agricultural lines.

The National Grange is soon to call a conference of the executive committees of all the bona fide, dues-paying farm organizations of the United States, to discuss many phases of the agricultural situation and to make definite plans for the establishment of the Agricultural Day of October, 1926.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. The "Young Upstart" Returns a Croesus

Knoxville, Iowa.—Walter Phillips, a bookkeeper, married the daughter of J. B. Elliott, millionaire banker of Knoxville. Under the frown of her family he was cast adrift upon his own resources, made millions and 18 years later came back to the rescue of his father-in-law's bank. That is the story that is stirring the town of Knoxville today.

Finding himself not in the best graces of his father-in-law, Phillips moved to Oklahoma where he made one of the most phenomenal "killings" in oil history. Four months ago he sold his interests in the Phillips Co. of Tulsa to Blair & Co., bankers of New York, for $25,000,000 and retired from business.

Returning to Knoxville about a month ago, Phillips, now worth about $40,000,000, stabilized Elliott's bank at Knoxville and saved the fortune of the Elliott family.

"When Walter left Knoxville I knew he had not saved more than $2,000," Mr. Elliott said, commenting upon the remarkable career of the "young upstart," as he called Phillips. "But I always knew he had it in him."

WILL EXHUME
INFANTS BODY
AT APRIL FARM

Allentown, Pa., Jan. 13.—(UP.)—In the "Great Swamp" cemetery near April Farm, officers today will exhume the body of the three-months-old child whose death has precipitated investigation of Charles Garland's social experiment farm.

The body was ordered exhumed last night, the district attorney maintaining that an autopsy should be performed to determine formally the exact circumstances of the child's death.

Coincident with this order Bettina Hovey, who is alleged to have been the mother of the child of which Garland himself is listed as the father, surrendered herself to officers here. She had been missing from the "back to nature" colony since the investigation of the child's death reached a critical stage.

In ordering the exhumation of the child, the district attorney said:

"I cannot believe that anybody would be so heartless as not to call a physician when a child is fatally ill. The child was said to have been very ill. From reports of Coroner Bausch, I am satisfied that in the issuance of the death certificate the circumstances of death were not suspicious. I hope that the death was from natural causes, but as district attorney I am compelled to check up every possible link to establish cause of death where there is any doubt."

The cause reported in the baby's death certificate was suffocation resulting from a throat infection.

Garland maintained his strict silence today, remaining at the pretty 200 acre farm where he and a group of men and women associates were applying their theories of a community life.

The farm, it is said, has been a financial success. The crops were sold in the fall at a reasonable profit and the members of the colony had settled down for a quiet winter when the authorities stepped in, declaring "injurious to the public interest" the "social experiments" being conducted and began their investigations.

Can't Keep Dog, So Boy
Flees Orphan Home

St. Louis.—Apparently displeased with life at the German Protestant Orphan Home on the St. Charles Rock road, Adolf Hajek, eleven years old, made two unsuccessful attempts to escape. His third attempt proved more successful, however.

Although he was detected before making his getaway, officials of the home refused to take him back. Instead they took him before Circuit Judge Hartmann, in Juvenile court.

To Judge Hartmann, Adolf explained his desire to leave the home. Didn't he like his treatment there? "You bet, Judge, they treated me fine," Adolf explained. "There was only one thing wrong. I wanted my dog 'Brownie,' and I ran away so I could be with him. And now they say I can't take him out there with me after I've gone after him three times."

An official of the home explained to the judge that the dog could not be admitted, whereupon Adolf declared he couldn't go back without "Brownie."

It was through the efforts of the Children's Aid society that Adolf has been placed with a private family, where "Brownie" also is welcome.

When all the large sashes were put away, there still remained in the second wagon a number of quite small ones, which Jasper began to hand down.

"What's them for?" inquired Aunt Ailsie of Virginia.

"Some small windows we brought in, thinking that people who have none might like to set them in their walls to let in the light. We intend trading them for things to eat."

Aunt Ailsie sprang to her feet. "Hit's what I have needed all my lifetime, and never knowed it!" she said. "With one of them fine glass windows set in the south wall of old house, the sunball will shine in all day, and lighten all my labors. I'll fetch you in apples or beans or anything I got to pay for it."

"You'll fetch us in nothing more," replied Virginia. "We intended all along to give you one if you wanted it. Here, Jasper, knock off one of those crates and hand me a couple of those shashes. Aunt Ailsie can take them along on old Darb as she rides home."

Jasper knocked off the crating and Aunt Ailsie clasped the small shashes to her bosom in sheer delight. "Haint they love-lee!" she said, passing her hands over frame and glass.

Virginia took a stout piece of twine and tied the shashes together.

"I'll hand them u to you," she said "after you get on old Darb."

Aunt Ailsie stood silent for a long moment, not making any start toward the nag, her face growing more and more sober and thoughtful.

"Virginny," she said at last, "there's a time for all things, and this haint the time for to take home my glass window. Hit's this way. My man Lot, besides being the balkingest man ever drawn breath, is everly agin' new things and new ideas. If I was to ride up on old Darb and flaunt these here shashes in his very face, hit would sartin be the everlasting end of glass window for me. To sudden him is pyore folly. What he needs is to get broke gradual to an idee, and kindly nayeuhulized to it. So I aim to wrop it up in about four bundles of fodder and tie it up again' the rafters in this here cowshed loft of yourn, where nobody won't never see it, and then bide my time. You know the Scrippter, "Continual drapping wears away a many stone," and "Times and agitations brings onlikely things to pass."

That same night in "old house," while Uncle Lot read Scripture and Aunt Ailsie washed dishes by fatpine light, Aunt Ailsie told of her visit to The Forks and the coming in of the two strange young women.

"And Virginny she tried to give me 'n' you one of them leetle glass windows for a present; she allowed hit would serve us fine in yander south wall, and help you to read Scrippter and me to weave and sech. She pressed me to fetch hit back o' Old Darb. I told her I never had hearded you spend your opinion on glass windows, but, being as you never was one to run after new things, and being as you and me had lived well without ary'n for forty-seven year, I allowed you would be again' it."

Uncle Lot looked up over his square silver specs in great surprise.

Nothing Doing in the Fish Line

Some people insist that measuring class by class, the lowest order of human intelligence in America is found among Key West sponge fishers. Others hold that the group placed at the foot of the column properly belongs to a certain order of theatrical producers. As proof of the value of their contention they point to the story of the theatrical manager, who, on being told that a play brought him by a certain dramatist was based upon one of Charles Dickens' novels, said:

"Well, you get hold of this fellow Dickens and bring him around to lunch tomorrow and we'll get his ideas and fix up a contract."

In the same connection there frequently is cited a remark by Wilton Lackaye who once expressed a desire, which he said he feared would never be gratified, to play the part of Jean Valjean in a stage adaptation of Hugo's Les Miserables. A friend spoke up:

"You never tuck hit?" he asked.

"No. I thanked her kindly and come on along home."

"I gonnies!" he exclaimed in astonishment, "You done right. I wouldn't a-thought hit of you, tho. A glass window," he ruminated, "a glass window is about the last and leastest thing hit would enter my headpiece to crave. Haint I lived here sixty-six year in perfect peace without ary'n? And my good old maw and paw twenty year afore my day? I never was one to go back on my raising. What has sarved me and my forepayrents eighty-six year' will sarve me on to my eend."

"I'm right proud you tuck that stand, Ailsie, and right surprised, too, the carynal mind in general, and yourn in p'ticlar, being prone to lust after every new thing hit sees. I remember me when Cynthy got her new cook stove, what a franzy you was in for one—and when Link fotched that air washboard up the branch for Rutheny, what a notion you tuck to have one, when you got the very finest battling-log and wash-trough in the country; and as for lamp-ile, if I'd give in to you, you'd have had us blowed to bits time out of mind. But hit pleasures me you use more judgment about a glass window. Hit shows my counsel haint been plumb throwed away."

Aunt Ailsie made no reply, but washed dishes diligently. Uncle Lot selected a fresh tick of pine from the basket at his side, lighted it at the expiring one, fixed it firmly in the chimney-jamb and, setting back in his chair and pushing up his specacles, suffered his gaze to roam about the big old room. In the north wall was the wide, open chimney in the east and west walls were doors, opening on front and back porches; but the south wall was solid, unbroken, its great, rounded, smooth logs apparently good for centuries to come.

"These here old walls," he resumed half in reverie, "was raised eighty-six year' gone by my paw when he fotched my maw in. His hands chopped and peeled and scribed and scored and hewed 'em, and helped to raise and notch 'em. And from that day they have looked down on the joys and sorrows the risings and settings, of a God-fearing generation."

"I sot my mind on you," continued Uncle Lot, "and when I had raised tother house yan side the old chimney here, I fotched you in. And again these old walls looked down on the joy of the bridegroom and the bride, and the waiters and kin all mustered at the infare. Then, afore long, they tuck another spell of seeing leetle feet pad about, and leetle hands explore cracks. And then, afore we knowed it, our offsprings was all fledged and out of the nest, and you and met left here to our lone.—But then I lift my eyes to these here old gray walls, that like well-tried friends, still stand staunch and true and pine-blank the same, and I feel stayed and upheld. I couldn't no more get my consent to lay violent hands on 'em and chop out a hole for a window, then if they was folks. Hit would be blasphemious!"

Very meekly Aunt Ailsie replied. "I allowed you would feel that way about it, paw." —Lucy Furman, in "The Glass Window."

"Isn't there a manager in town who can produce it?"

"There isn't a manager in town who can even pronounce it," said Lackaye.

Without any desire to take part in the controversy over the respective merits of the theatrical managers and the Key West sponge-fishers, I herewith submit, for what it may be worth, an incident which happened a few months ago in the office of a prominent producing manager, whose name is a household word in every actor's home. To him there came an experienced playwright bearing the script of a new piece which he had just finished.

"I don't want you should read it to me, now," said the manager. "Just tell me what it's like."

"Well," said the playwright, "it's a historical drama in five acts. I call it 'The Dauphin.'"

"For why do you call it that?"

"Because it's based on the story of the Lost Dauphin."

"I don't want it," said the manager emphatically. "It wouldn't go. The public wouldn't never stand for a play about a fish."

AMUSEMENTS

A story of the storms and dangers of the New England coast, of a life-saver and his battle to keep the record of his station clean, the ambition and love and even honor tempt him to forget that duty.

That's what one finds at the Metropolitan theater, where the Irvin Willat-Paramount production, "Rugged Water," from the novel by that name by Joseph C. Lincoln, author of "Fair Harbor," "Savings," etc., is the feature.

"Rugged Water," one of the best selling novels this country has ever known, has lent itself to perfect screen adaptation. Featured in the leading roles of the picture are Lois Wilson, Warner Baxter, Wallace Beery and Phyllis Haver.

The scenes are laid in and about the Setucket Life Saving station on Cape Cod. Baxter, Number One man on the crew, is the logical successor to the position of the retiring captain, but a little red tape results in the appointment of an older man from a nearby station. The men do not take to him any too well, but Calvin Homer Baxter, who's heart and soul in the service puts every ounce of energy into serving his new chief and covering up the captain's blunders, for he has discovered that he is in love with Norma, Bartlett's daughter.

A storm comes up, and Captain Bartlett shows his true colors by refusing to send a boat out to a foundering ship. Homer stages a little mutiny and directs a thrilling rescue all, as Norma thinks, to better his own chances of replacing her father. There's a regular lover's misunderstanding, a broken engagement and a "different" climax that furnishes one of the biggest thrills the screen has ever known.

Speaking of realism, you can almost feel the spray when "Rugged Water" is on view.

Beery plays Captain Bartlett, Miss Wilson is his daughter Norma, and Phyllis Haver has the role of the village vamp who looks upon Baxter as a "catch" and manages to get herself engaged to him, he being a little back ward where ladies are concerned.

There's an ideal cast playing in support of the principals.

Providing a Clean Bill of Health

On a voyage back from France after hostilities had ended, one of the transports had aboard a negro labor battalion. Included among the returning veterans of the Brest docks was a crap shooter of mighty powers, originally from Memphis.

Off the banks the ship ran into nasty weather, and the gamester, frightfully seasick, lay in his bunk too miserable and too weak to move, and expecting each succeeding moment to be his last, as the craft stood first on end and then wallowed deep in the trough of the sea. As a matter of fact, the peril was real. The laboring steamer had blundered off her course and was dangerously near the shores of Newfoundland. Suddenly in the middle of the night a siren steam whistle at a lighthouse station on the mainland blared out, the sound rising above the roar of the wind. To the sufferer in bed down below, that appalling blast could mean but one thing—the trumpet call of judgment day.

He got down on his knees and prepared to uplift his voice in prayer for salvation. Then he remembered what he carried in his trousers pockets. He reached in his pocket and as he flung into space his educated ivory he cried out:

"Gitt away, evidences! Come on, Angel Gabriel!"

DISCONTINUES
JITNEY DANCES

Owing to the lack of patronage and expense of conducting the C. A. C. jitney dances every Saturday night, the committee in charge has decided to discontinue the weekly dances. However, these popular dances will be resumed in the near future and special orchestras will be engaged just as soon as the committee thinks the demand will justify the expense. Announcements will be made in this paper for the next dance so watch these columns for the date.

The first clock which shows any relation to our modern idea of clocks is said to have been made in England about 1335 by a monk named Peter Lightfoot. Up to 1500 the use of clocks was confined chiefly to cathedrals and large buildings.

IT HAPPENED IN ENGLAND

A criminal was charged with murder. He was brought to trial, tried, convicted and sentenced to be hanged, all within an hour.

But it wasn't in Chicago. It wasn't in the United States at all. It was in England.

It may be an argument for severe punishment, for the death penalty for murder, and again it may not. Opinions differ on that score, for four states having the death penalty—at least two of them, New York and Illinois—have the greatest murder record. But it is an argument for swift punishment, whatever form that punishment takes.

The criminal fears speedy justice.—Evanston News-Index.

Silage Spoilage Easy to Prevent*Doors Should Be Fitted to Make Sure They Are Securely Airtight.

Much silage is wasted each year by molding or rotting. The presence of air is the cause of both.

Where wood-stave silos are in use the hoops should be tightened, the inside of the silo coated with creosote, and the outside painted, advises the New Jersey State College of Agriculture at New Brunswick. The doors should be examined and fitted to make sure that they are airtight, for they sometimes fall apart during the summer because of drying out.

Spoilage Traced to Air.

Where a silo is airtight and the silage continues to spoil it can still be traced to air that has not been excluded at filling time by sufficient tramping. If silage is cut too green, the possibilities are strong that there will be some rotting. If it is cut too dry, molding is probable because air cannot be excluded unless the silage is wet.

The proper stage for cutting the corn is after the kernel is dented, but before the milk dries up. If, for some unavoidable reason, the corn does get too dry before putting it into the silo, it is advisable to put a water hose inside of the blower, and in that way moisten the fodder.

A lack of sufficient tramping around the walls during filling is also a common cause of molding. Many dairymen attempt to economize by placing only one man in the silo when it is being filled. This is poor economy, as one man cannot keep the silage level and tramp it sufficiently. Thorough tramping, especially around the walls, will save much labor and useless waste next winter.

Spoiling on Top.

Some spoiling on top must be expected at first. A good method is to fill the last six or twelve inches with either weeds or dry fodder soaked with water. If nothing else is available, it is well to take off the ears and use merely the fodder on top, as it will spoil anyway. Unless this fodder is very green, water should be added through the blower. Some have found that oats, rye or wheat sown on top will sprout and thus form a desirable airtight mat.

Proper Care IncreasesLife of Farm Tractor

Tractors, like horses, do not last long if they are neglected or abused. Some simple rules for increasing the life of these machines as well as for reducing their repair bills are offered by E. R. Gross, professor of rural engineering at the New Jersey State College of Agriculture.

1. Handle the tractor as though it could feel. This will avoid many broken or bent parts.

2. Do not race the motor except when it seems necessary. The governor is intended to protect the motor when under load. The operator must throttle it when it is running idle.

3. In almost all cases move slowly instead of by jerks. It is easier on the machine. This applies to shifting gears and operating the throttle and clutch.

4. Examine the machine throughout in order to detect any loose bolts. Tighten them before damage is done. This, with oiling and greasing, is as essential as the daily care given a work animal.

5. Motor repairs and adjustments such as taking up bearings, replacing piston rings, cleaning spark plugs, removing carbon, and the like, must be done eventually, but may be deferred if the tractor is carefully operated.

6. In addition to the daily care, give the tractor each winter a thorough cleaning with water to remove dirt, and with kerosene to remove grease. If it is needed, an overhauling should accompany the cleaning.

Heifer Calves Deserve
Attention of Dairymen

The heifer calf dropped this fall—the cow of two or three years hence—should be given a fair start now. Whole milk from its dam for the first week and from the herd for two or three weeks longer is almost essential. But as early as the third week of the calf's life it should be offered grain and hay so that it will not miss the fat of the milk when the change is made to skim milk. The change to skim milk should be made gradually. If whole milk is being sold and there is no skim milk available, powdered buttermilk diluted with nine parts water and fed at the same rate as skim milk is equally satisfactory.

Experimental work has proved the value of buttermilk for calf feeding, only where there is no skim milk available. Whole oats, cracked corn and bran make a good grain for the calf. Coarse alfalfa hay is preferable to leafy hay. A darkened shed will afford the calf protection from flies.

Cut Egg Crop Short

Overheated poultry houses hasten the molt and therefore cut the egg crop short. Rear ventilators over the roosts are essential for comfort. All doors and windows and ventilators should be kept open as much as possible. Summer drafts do not injure hens. Good egg production can be maintained by supplying, in addition to the grain, green succulent feed, as for example: Alfalfa pasture, finely chopped sudan grass or rape and a mash moistened with water or milk, together with cool roosting quarters.

NEW SITEFor Feeble Minded Institute Will Be Selected Before February First.

Columbus, Jan. 13.—U(P).—Governor Vic Donahey today definitely assured Mrs. Francis E. Gould, Cleveland, that the Northern Ohio site for the new state institution for feeble minded will be selected before Feb. 1 and that construction work on the project will start without delay.

Mrs. Gould called on the governor late yesterday and presented a petition signed by 15,000 club women, urging work on the proposed institution be expedited. The petition stressed the fact that the $300,000 appropriation made by the last legislature for the institution, should not be allowed to lapse.

The advisory committee appointed by Governor Donahey to select a site, still was without any definite plans today. The committee is co-operating with State Welfare Director Harper.

Numerous cities are bidding for the institution. The advisory committee recently rejected the Grafton farm site because of the lack of an adequate water supply.

"Elements"

The term element was first given its modern meaning by Robert Boyle, an English scientist, who lived from 1627 to 1691. Certain of the elements, however, were known to the ancient alchemists, but their conception was not clear.

LIABILITY INSURANCEWhat It Is and the Benefits That Accrue to the Policy Holders.

I wonder if you realize that every car owner is responsible to the public for the operation of his car, whether he drives it himself or allows others to drive it.

PUBLIC LIABILITY is an insurance term indicating the responsibility the car owner is under for injuries or death inflicted on persons thru the operation of his car.

It is most important of all automobile insurance features, owing to the unknown possibilities of the claims.

Some of the factors making accidents and consequent liability claims daily more numerous, and the owner's risk in operating a car an ever increasing one, are:

CONGESTION OF TRAFFIC. Roads are about the same width as formerly, yet traffic thereon has greatly increased. Between fifteen and twenty million motor vehicles are registered in the United States today. This vast number is being increased daily.

LOW PRICES OF SECOND-HAND CARS have added greatly to the number of irresponsible drivers, who menace all other users of the roads. The careful, sane driver is often the sufferer from the faults of others. IMPROVED HIGHWAYS are a constant temptation to speedsters and encourage less careful attention on the part of all drivers.

THE CHILDREN MUST PLAY, and there being very little yard space around the average city home, the playing is done in the path of the motorists. The heavy tolls of 1924 in life, injuries and property losses have been given wide publicity in the press of the country.

AMBULANCE-CHASING LAWYERS (and there is one or more in every city) make a business of creating cases against any car owner involved in an accident, whether or not it is serious, whether or not he is liable and particularly if he has property.

COURT CHARGES AND ATTORNEY'S FEES MUST BE PAID, and eventually, possibly a heavy judgment to be paid with interest and costs. The feelings, sympathies and judgments of juries are generally in favor of the injured and against the car owner. Verdicts for injuries or death run into thousands of dollars, and are larger than ever before. Even if you win, your expenses mount to a large figure.

An automobile liability guarantees the investigation of claims whether you are liable or not, adjusts, pays, fights your case if necessary, pays expenses, lawyer's fees and court costs, relieves you from responsibility and worry. It does all of this for the owner and for any one legally operating the car with the owner's permission.

If you are now carrying liability insurance, the above facts will serve to strengthen the conviction that led you to protect yourself.

This information, coupled with the fact that last year no fewer than twenty-eight states introduced bills for compulsory liability insurance, is conclusive evidence of the advisability of every car owner relieving himself of personal liability.

My Favorite Stories

By IRVIN S. COBB

The Leaning Tower of Baltimore

In Baltimore, years ago, there was a shot tower that stood up in the air to a considerable height. Almost at the base of the shot tower a serious-minded German ran a saloon.

Eugene Havez, afterwards a New York theatrical man and now in the moving picture business in California, lived in Baltimore when the shot tower stood there. One day Havez and a friend of his found themselves in the vicinity of the shotworks. Both were thirsty and both, as it happened, without funds. Havez had an idea.

He outlined it to his companion and then they entered the saloon in a violent argument with each other. "I'll bet you anything I'm right," Havez declared.

"You're wrong," stated his friend stubbornly, "you're just naturally bound to be wrong."

They lined up at the bar still debating. The German waiting patiently to serve them became interested.

"I'll show you how game I am," said Havez. "I'll bet you the drinks I'm right and leave it to our friend here to decide it."

"That's a go," said the other man. "Set out the drinks," commanded Havez.

The German served them and they drank.

"Now, boys," inquired the saloon man, "vat is dis bet?"

"It's like this," said Havez edging toward the door, "my friend here bets that when the shot tower falls down it will fall to the north. I say it will fall to the south."

PATIENTLY AWAIT
ANOTHER MIRACLE

But Missionaries in Bagdad Have Hopes.

A delightful story comes from the Christian medical missions in Bagdad to the Youth's Companion. In the lovely date-palm gardens of the city a thief was discovered, not long ago, robbing one of the trees of its luscious fruit. The owner, a hasty, passionate man, promptly shot him, and the man fell from the top of a lofty palm to the ground. He was hurried away to the Christian hospital, with a bullet in his body, a broken arm and a shattered leg. On his way he begged to be put beneath a Moslem roof, even if it were a prison, rather than be left in the clutches of dogs of Christians. But, as he was a criminal, his captors paid no attention to his wishes.

At the hospital they speedily put him under an anesthetic, extracted the bullet, set his broken limbs, and before long he was comfortably settled on a palm-fabric cot, trussed up with dressings, but alive and likely to get well. For a long time he was very suspicious and surly and would have little to say to the missionary whenever he attempted to converse with him. But gradually he received and one day he astonished the missionary with the remark: "This is a miracle! It's a place of miracles!"

"We deal," replied the missionary, with much more difficult cases than yours, Ibrahim. You should see some of them."

"Ah! That is not my meaning," replied the man. "As I have been lying here I have seen rich men come to the door of this hospital and offer jewels even to half their wealth to the surgeon to come and attend their wives and children; but always he says, 'The poor must come first'; and he who might be so rich slaves here in the heat night and day for wretches like me, who can give them nothing. That is a miracle!"

Indeed, so touched was Ibrahim by the loving sacrifice of his new friends that he simply had to be turned away from the hospital when he was recovered.

"But what can I do for you, sir?" he begged. "Is there nothing I can do?"

"Yes," replied the surgeon, "send me some more patients."

"Allah!" cried Ibrahim. "Here is a man who might have all the world if he asked for it, and all he wants is more work. You are a miracle, sir! But I will do something for you. Do you like dates, sir?"

"Yes, I like dates," said the surgeon, smiling.

"Then, sir, let me know when you want some, and I'll always steal them for you!"

The missionary and the surgeon shook their heads over their patient, as he left them, and one remarked to the other, "Another miracle is wanted there, but evidently we've made some impression. Let us have hope that the rest will come in time."

TRAIN SINKS IN GUMBO, FIND OIL

Drilling Crew, Forced to Unload, Makes Strike.

Dallas, Texas.—The opening up of Reagan county, Texas, as a great oil-producing area has furnished one of the most interesting chapters in the history of oil-field developments in this country.

A year or so ago a party of Texas business men obtained from the state authorities leases on many square miles of prairie lands in that county for the purpose of exploiting the acreage for oil. The leases in question were located about 150 miles from the nearest oil production.

After the company had sold stock for about 20 cents a share and raised more money by the formation of an allied organization to which a considerable acreage was assigned the work of drilling a test well in this wildcat territory was undertaken.

A railroad that has been in the hands of receivers for a long time passed through a large section of this property. Believing the railroad was in a hopeless condition, the receivers had petitioned the state authorities for consent to abandon the property, which was in reality a streak of rust, and to sell the rails and other assets as junk. The state railroad commission declined to grant the request.

After loading up several flat cars with derrick timber, casings and other material necessary to drill an oil well, the Pioneer Oil company of Reagan county directed the railroad officials to convey the material to a point along the broken down railroad, from which point the drilling material was to be hauled some miles by horses to a place where it was considered most desirable to start the test well.

After the drilling material had been transported about fifty miles from the loading point the rails began to settle and finally the weight of the locomotive and freight cars caused the roadway to sink in Texas gumbo, to the depth of several feet.

Being unable to proceed any farther, the drilling material was unloaded and it was then and there decided to drill on the spot. The well came in a large high-gravity producer. It opened up what is now considered the most promising light oil field in Texas.

NO WONDER

Girl's Legs Look Good As Stocking Bill Is $345,000,000.

Five hundred dollars for a pair of stockings. Cheaper grades at $250 and $100 a pair. These are the prices on regular stock displayed in a Fifth Avenue store in New York City. Yet they account for but a small part of the $345,000,000 which the women of the United States pay yearly for their silk stockings.

A girl getting a weekly wage of $22.50 buys a pair of silk stockings every pay day at a cost of $1.75 or $1.59 according to whether or not she strikes a bargain sale—and considers herself economical. She may have to cut her luncheon money but not her expenditure for stockings.

Recently the proprietor of a cotton mill in Rhode Island employing thousands of women conducted a survey and found that 68 per cent of his employees were not wearing a stitch of cotton—their stockings, knickers and printed frocks were all silk.

These are only a few of the startling facts regarding the craze for silk garments reported in an article in this week's Liberty. Included among them is the following amusing incident:

The president of a huge silk concern stepped out of his private car with some friends at a water tank down in West Virginia. They wanted a breath of air and had ten minutes to get it. Green hills rich with coal rose precipitously all about them. About as far up one of the hillsides as this merchant could have driven a golf ball, the daughter of a coal miner was to be seen milking a cow that was tied to the unpainted fence palings that formed their back yard.

"I'd like to bet you, gentlemen," proposed the silk manufacturer, "that your milkmaid wears silk stockings."

"Taken for a hundred," eagerly snapped one of his party, "and you don't have to pay me if she is wearing any kind of stockings. Likely enough she's barefooted."

They climbed the hill, wheezing painfully, and presently stood beside the young woman. Seemingly they were interested in the cow. The girl smiled at them but kept on milking.

A BACK YARD
SILKWORM FARM

Thousands of school children in the United States owe their first hand knowledge of the industrious silk-worm to T. A. Keleher, an amateur entomologist of Washington, D. C., who for 26 years has been experimenting with silk-worm culture in his own back yard. On half a dozen mulberry trees he raises from 10,000 to 20,000 of the creatures a year, says Popular Science Monthly, distributing them among schools as living exhibits. Every cocoon contains from 750 to 1,000 yards of silk.

Artificial "Sun" Makes Hay

In England, where damp and foggy

TIRE MAKERS WILL INVEST $50,000,000

In Production of Crude Rubber in the Next Five Years.

New York, Jan. 13.—(UP.)—
More than $50,000,000 will be thrown into production of crude rubber in the next five years by large manufacturers in this country, in a desperate effort to break
the British monopoly.

This sum will be in addition to the $100,000,000 that Harvey S.
Firestone, president of the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. has announced he will spend in Liberia,
expecting eventually to have one
million acres of rubber trees
which would produce annually
250,000 tons of rubber.

Following a conference with Secretary of Commerce Hoover
yesterday, several organizations were formed "to protect the American public and the rubber industry, with respect to future
supplies."

The organizations, The Rubber Association of America and the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, intend to spend $10,000,000 a year for the planting of rubber trees in areas under American control, or where favorable conditions could be assured.

Concurrently with the plantation development plans, earnest consideration will be given to stimulating greater production of wild rubber, particularly in Brazil, in order to alleviate the immediate situation, it was stated
after the conference.

That private interests in the industry, believed to be the large automobile manufacturers, are working on plans for plantation development on a large scale, also was brought out at the discussion with Hoover, it was learned.

A. L. Viles, general manager of the Rubber Association of America, declared the two most favorable points selected for growing rubber trees were the Philippines and Sumatra under Dutch
control.

Birth Rate Is Lowest in History of Nation

New York.—The birth rate in America is now lower than at any other period of her history and, due to the increasing practice of birth control, the finest qualities of the race are in danger of being lost.
These are the conclusions of Dr.
Frederick L. Hoffman, statistician, drawn from his research work for the Prudential Insurance company. About the only encouragement he finds is that the death rate is the lowest ever known, with one exception. He places
the annual number of births in this country as about 2,600,000 and the deaths as 1,300,000.

"The question of birth control would admit of no discussion," he says in his report, "if the decrease in the birth rate affected exclusively the undesirable elements of the population.
However, the reduction in births applies largely to those who are intellectually as well as morally and economically of the superior type."

"If there is anything in the theory
of the hereditary transmission of fine qualities, it must be apparent that we are deliberately encouraging diminution of pronounced types of intelligence and character upon which the nation must rely for its direction
and guidance."

OHIO STATE LEGISLATURE IN SESSION

RELIEF FOR BELMONT AND ALLEN COUNTIES GIVEN

Ross P. Buchanan, of Carroll County, Author of the Compulsory Bible Bill, Tried to Force the Caucus to Give His Pet Bill Priority—Failing In This He Threatened to Run For Governor—Claims Kluxer Support.

Columbus, Jan. 15, (UP).—Admittedly fearing senate insurgents who all but bolted the senate caucus Thursday night, the Ohio general assembly convened at 9 a. m. today to enact emergency relief legislation for bankrupt and near-bankrupt taxing districts.

Whether the session would confine its procedure to the relief bill, as pledged, refusing consideration of "omnibus" and repeater measures, was shrouded in doubt as the chambers were called to order.

Contrasting conditions in the senate, almost complete harmony, interspersed by only a few malcontents, prevailed in the house.

An air of uncertainty permeated the senate where the ominous warnings of senate insurgents who may seek to prolong the session in violation of pre session pledges, were sounded.

The senate caucused for three hours Thursday night, accomplishing nothing except an agreement to caucus again this morning.

The house caucus brought more definite results, the solons voting 72 to 22 to enact the relief bill and voting down proposals to consider other legislation.

Before the chambers convened, senate leaders sounded out sentiment among the senators in an effort to pledge enough votes to insure passage of the relief measure and keep other legislation from being presented or recalled.

Enactment of the relief measure as emergency legislation, requires 87 votes in the house, but leaders were confident the majority would be easily mustered.

The house caucus overwhelmingly defeated the attempt of Representative Ross Buchanan of Carroll county, to bring up his Bible bill for passage over Governor Donahey's veto.

"I feel that if anything is taken up at this session it should be the Bible bill," Buchanan told the caucus, moving the representatives be relieved of their pledges to consider nothing except the emergency bill.

Representative Roberts, Mahoning county, seconded the motion which was defeated 67 to 11.

Buchanan then served notice he would attempt to bring up his bill when the house convened.

"If the bill is not acted upon, I will become a candidate for governor and make it an issue in my campaign" he asserted.

The house members also rejected a proposal to consider the passage over the governor's veto, of the Lipp bill which would take jurisdiction over employees of the public utilities commission from the state director of commerce and give it to the commission.

Similar attempts in the senate were voted down over protest of Senator Clark, Campaign county.

The emergency relief bill as approved by taxation committees of the house and senate, provides:

1. That interest and sinking fund levies above four mills may be placed outside the 15 mill limitation on petition of 51 per cent of the voters of a taxing district.

2. The deficiency now existing in county funds may be funded over a period of five years instead of having to be paid out of this year's revenues.

3. That five-sixths of the cost of compulsory real estate reappraisal may be funded over a five year period instead of having the entire cost paid out of one year's revenue.

4. That school districts, on petition of 60 per cent of the voters, may levy an extra three mill levy for school purposes.

Representative Robert A. Taft, Cincinnati, was elected speaker of the house succeeding former Speaker Harry D. Silver, who resigned.

Taft's election was opposed by the corn bloc which supported Representative J. H. T. Gordon of Logan county.

The vote was; Taft 80; Gordon 15. A majority of the Democrats did not vote.

Taft formerly was majority floor leader and was serving his third term.

Immediately after the election of Taft, the emergency relief bill was introduced by Representative W. E. Baxter of Allen county, under a suspension of the rules.

The bill at once was referred to the taxation committee and the house recessed for half an hour while the committee prepared its report.

The Baxter bill passed by both house and senate today and has been sent to Governor Donahey.

HEADS FARM BUREAUS

QUEBEC HOTEL MOST FAMOUS ON CONTINENT

Chateau Frontenac Overlooking the St. Lawrence River Burned Thursday.

Quebec, Canada, Jan. 15, (UP).—The old section of the Chateau Frontenac, winter tourist headquarters and one of the most famous show places of the continent, lies in ruins today.

After a ten hours battle in which four firemen were badly injured, the blaze, which started on the fifth floor of the structure and spread rapidly, finally was brought under control.

One by one the famous Colonial suite, which has been visited by thousands of tourists from all the world, the Canadian suite and the royal suite fell prey to the flames. Firemen were called back to safety when the copper roof, melted by the intense heat began to sag.

Dining and sleeping cars dispatched to the scene by the Canadian Pacific railroad took care of the overflow of guests who had failed to find accommodations in neighboring rooming houses. Many members of the Quebec legislature which now is in session were forced to go to Montreal for the weekend recess.

Early Thursday night when it appeared practically certain that firemen were facing a long battle with the flames, tourists from across the American border, travelers from overseas and other guests numbering approximately 400, began moving their effects from the hotel, accepting philosophically the inconvenience of seeking makeshift quarters.

In the new wing whose tower stood majestically over the smoldering ruins, elevator service was maintained thruout the night to aid the firemen in their battle.

Employees stood guard in the path of the flames ready to protect the lives and property of their guests should the fire spread to the new addition.

The loss has not been estimated.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Jan. 15, (UP).—In the gray light of early dawn, Ralph W. Seyboldt, Columbus, Ohio, convicted slayer of Patrolman David Crowther, was shot to death at the state prison today by a rifle squad.

Execution of the 23 year old prisoner followed vain appeals of fellow Ohioans and pastors of the local churches for commutation of sentence to life imprisonment.

Seyboldt faced the firing squad a few seconds before 8 o'clock. At 8:01 the command was given, the rifles cracked and Seyboldt crumpled in a heap. He was pronounced dead a minute later.

WEEKS BRIDE IS ACCUSED OF KILLING SPOUSE

This was Her Fourth Venture in the Matrimonial World.

Mrs. Laura Christy, 49, of East Liverpool, Ohio, bride of a week, was taken into custody here Thursday for questioning in connection with the sudden death of her husband, William, 56, an itinerant preacher, who died here Thursday night.

When arrested Mrs. Christy admitted her marriage to the minister was her fourth matrimonial venture. Christy, became ill suddenly Tuesday.

Coroner J. M. Van Fossan announced he would make a post mortem examination of Christy's vital organs, expressing the belief that poison caused the clergyman's death.

Mrs. Christy was arrested near the Ohio river bridge connecting East Liverpool and Newell, West Virginia. According to the police, Christy carried $300 life insurance. Three hundred dollars Christy had on deposit in a bank was withdrawn by Mrs. Christy Thursday, they said.

Mrs. Christy denied any connection with her husband's illness and death. She was committed to the Columbiana county jail Thursday night awaiting grand jury action after she plead not guilty to first degree murder charge in connection with the death of her husband, Rev. William Christy, 56.

Christy was a representative of the United Christian Missionary Workers with national headquarters at East Akron.

Chief of Police McDermott preferred the murder charge after the woman he said, confessed to him and Prosecuting Attorney R. M. Brookes that she had administered poison to her husband, who died Thursday night.

According to Mrs. Christy's signed confession, she gave Christy the poison "because he asked for it." She said it was administered for indigestion.

A post mortem examination of the body is being made by the coroner.

ANNUAL

Convention of National Canners' Association.

Columbus, Jan. 14.—Approximately 75 per cent of last year's canning of sweet corn has been sold, according to estimates made by canners here today. The last quarter of 1925 broke all records for the consumption of canned foods and it is believed that the first half of 1926 will set a new mark for the use of canned products. Corn is one of the most popular of canned foods and the Ohio product has a national market because of its excellence. To be just right corn must be canned when it has the highest sugar content along with texture and consistency. To get the corn when it is at the right stage, and handle it promptly, canneries have been established virtually in the corn fields.

Ohio's leading corn canneries may be found in Clinton, Warren, Butler, Pickaway, Logan, Fayette, Franklin, Madison, Highland, Champaign, Huron, Ross, Greene, Van Wert and possibly one or two other counties.

Several hundred Ohio canners and food jobbers will go to Louisville on January 25 for the annual convention of the National Cannery Association and the meeting of food brokers and pickle and kraut packers. Louisville is preparing for 10,000 visitors.

All the officers of the Ohio Cannery Association will attend the Louisville meeting. They are: J. Warren Wood, President, Lebanon; J. I. Smith, Vice President, Circleville; Roy Irons, Sec'y., Treas., Clyde; and Arthur Hamilton, Lebanon; Howard A. Orr, Circleville; Harry McDonald, Elyria; James Stoops, Van Wert, and A. L. Sharp, Celina, directors.

PERSIA IS RULED BY HORSE GROOM

Headed Revolt Which Cleared Way to Throne.

New York.—From hostler in the stables of the Cossacks to shah of Persia has been the rise of Reza Khan Pehlevi.
 From tender of the horses, Reza entered the Cossacks and in 1921 led the revolt which culminated in the overthrow of the government, the deposition of the shah, and his assumption of the role of dictator.
 And now, advices from Teheran, the capital of Persia, say that on December 14 Reza ascended the throne. Meanwhile, Ahmed Kajar, the twenty-seven-year-old deposed monarch, is in France, moving frequently between Paris and the Riviera, and declaring that he still remains the ruler of his erstwhile realm.
 "I am, and remain the legitimate and constitutional sovereign of Persia," declares Ahmed Kajar, "and I await the hour to return to my country to continue to serve my people."
 The dashing Reza, despite his humble origin—he is the son of a Persian—is possessed of both strategy and statecraft. As soon as he became premier and minister of war, in other words, dictator, he began the reorganization of the country. At first he desired a republic, but he was thwarted in his efforts to establish one by the opposition of the priests. Then when the national assembly late in October proclaimed the deposition of the Kajara dynasty, Reza is said to have immediately set his heart on ascending the throne.
 He brought about unification of the unruly tribes in a single entity and raised an army of 40,000 men. He saw that they were paid, fed and clothed, thus insuring to himself their loyalty when needed. Personal courage is said to have aided him materially in holding his troops in hand. When in 1921 the Khorassan tribe rebelled, Reza is declared to have gone personally into the rebel camp, killed the leader and put down the rebellion.
 The Persian government, known as the national consultative assembly, has been retained by Reza to carry out his will in the manner of a constitutional regime. It is this body which it is believed has sanctioned his elevation to the throne.

KEEPING WELL
 WHO SHOULD DRIVE
 AUTOMOBILES?
 DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
 Editor of "HEALTH"

WHEN you get on a railroad train and roll into your pullman berth, you go to sleep with perfect confidence in the intelligence and ability of the man at the throttle. You know that the engineer of a passenger train is sure to be a tried and tested employee of years of training and experience. You know that his eyes and his nerves and his heart have been examined and tested, that he does not befuddle his brain with whisky or drugs and that his ability to think clearly and act promptly in an emergency has been proven.
 This was not always true. In the early years of railroad building, many accidents were due to unfit men in the engine cab. But gradually it was learned, often by costly mistakes, that the safe and successful engineer must be a man with keen and perfect vision and with nerves and muscles always under control.
 But a new method of travel has developed in the last 20 years. There are today over 12,000,000 motor cars in this country. Traveling as fast as the average train, carrying every day many times more passengers than all the railroads put together, automobiles are today far more dangerous to life than railroad trains. This is shown by the large number of people killed every year by autos, as compared to the comparatively small number of lives lost by railroad accidents.
 We are just beginning to realize that the same qualities of mind and body are required to drive an auto as to run a steam engine.
 Before the World war, practical business men had a marked contempt for scientific men. They were all right in lecture rooms and laboratories, but they had no connection with every-day business matters. The physical and mental tests used in classifying and sorting the men in the draft opened the eyes of many captains of industry.
 The other day the management of the Yellow Cab company asked Prof. A. J. Snow of Northwestern university to apply psychological tests to their 3,000 cab drivers to determine if any of them were unsuited for work as chauffeurs. Professor Snow used three tests to determine the mental alertness, rapidity of nerve and muscle reactions and sensory acuteness of these men. He reported that 18 per cent of the oldest drivers in the employ of the company were unfitted to drive cabs and should be given inside jobs or dismissed. The officials were skeptical and to prove that the psychologist was wrong, they checked up the record of each man. They found that the 18 per cent of drivers pronounced unfit were responsible for 48 per cent of all their accidents.
 Do you know that the driver of the car in which you ride has keen eyes, steady nerves and muscles which act immediately to meet an emergency? If you don't, keep out of his car. Do you know that you are fit to drive a car yourself? If you don't, find out or let someone else drive.

Mercury Non-Magnetic

The bureau of standards says that mercury is one of the so-called non-magnetic elements and cannot be magnetized in the ordinary sense. As a matter of fact it is "dia magnetic" and when placed in a magnetic field carries fewer "lines of force" per unit of area than the space around it. The effect is very small, and very sensitive apparatus is necessary to measure it.

TO BENEFIT THE FARMER

Much Interest Shown In the Grange Proposal of An Agricultural Day.

Widespread attention has been attracted to the project launched by the National Grange at its Sacramento session, for establishing an Agricultural Day, to be held in October each year, and designed to call to public attention the importance of the agricultural industry and the necessity for a better understanding by the public of the problems of agriculture, affecting both producer and consumers. Agricultural leaders in all sections of the country have expressed their hearty approval of the idea and it has also met a favorable response from the press as well as from those engaged in department work for agriculture, state and national.

The Grange idea of an Agricultural Day has no thought of adding another holiday to the list, which farmers consider altogether too long already; but rather the adoption of the Arbor Day plan, when the occasion shall be dignified by proclamation of the President and of governors, and provide chiefly for local observances under various organized auspices, to emphasize the great thought that "the farmer feeds them all."

It is believed possible through programs in the schools, by public exercises with appropriate programs, and by a general campaign of educational publicity, to carry to many people, especially in villages, towns and cities, who are now without it, information concerning the food supply of the country, the value of fresh, wholesome farm products, the actual cost of production and some of the knotty problems with which farmers have to wrestle. On the other hand in rural communities the thought of agricultural co-operation and of quality improvement will be stressed, while the outcome of the whole project is aimed at disseminating information looking towards a better balance between consumers and producers, affecting both production and distribution along agricultural lines.

The National Grange is soon to call a conference of the executive committees of all the bona fide, dues-paying farm organizations of the United States, to discuss many phases of the agricultural situation and to make definite plans for the establishment of the Agricultural Day of October, 1926.

The "Young Upstart" Returns a Croesus

Knoxville, Iowa.—Walte Phillips, a bookkeeper, married the daughter of J. B. Elliott, millionaire banker of Knoxville. Under the frown of her family he was cast adrift upon his own resources, made millions and 18 years later came back to the rescue of his father-in-law's bank. That is the story that is stirring the town of Knoxville today.

Finding himself not in the best graces of his father-in-law, Phillips moved to Oklahoma where he made one of the most phenomenal "killings" in oil history. Four months ago he sold his interests in the Phillips Co. of Tulsa to Blair & Co., bankers of New York, for $25,000,000 and retired from business.

Returning to Knoxville about a month ago, Phillips, now worth about $40,000,000, stabilized Elliott's bank at Knoxville and saved the fortune of the Elliott family.

"When Walte left Knoxville I know he had not saved more than $2,000," Mr. Elliott said, commenting upon the remarkable career of the "young upstart," as he called Phillips. "But I always knew he had it in him."

INFANTS BODY
AT APRIL FARM

Allentown, Pa., Jan. 13.—(U.P.)—In the "Great Swamp" cemetery near April Farm, officers today will exhume the body of the three-months-old child whose death has precipitated investigation of Charles Garland's social experiment farm.

The body was ordered exhumed last night, the district attorney maintaining that an autopsy should be performed to determine formally the exact circumstances of the child's death.

Coincident with this order Bettina Hovey, who is alleged to have been the mother of the child of which Garland himself is listed as the father, surrendered herself to officers here. She had been missing from the "back to nature" colony since the investigation of the child's death reached a critical stage.

In ordering the exhumation of the child, the district attorney said:

"I cannot believe that anybody would be so heartless as not to call a physician when a child is fatally ill. The child was said to have been very ill. From reports of Coroner Bausch, I am satisfied that in the issuance of the death certificate the circumstances of death were not suspicious. I hope that the death was from natural causes, but as district attorney I am compelled to check up every possible link to establish cause of death where there is any doubt."

The cause reported in the baby's death certificate was suffocation resulting from a throat infection.

Garland maintained his strict silence today, remaining at the pretty 200 acre farm where he and a group of men and women associates were applying their theories of a community life.

The farm, it is said, has been a financial success. The crops were sold in the fall at a reasonable profit and the members of the colony had settled down for a quiet winter when the authorities stepped in, declaring "injurious to the public interest" the "social experiments" being conducted and began their investigations.

Can't Keep Dog, So Boy
Flees Orphan Home

St. Louis.—Apparently displeased with life at the German Protestant Orphan Home on the St. Charles Rock road, Adolph Hajek, eleven years old, made two unsuccessful attempts to escape. His third attempt proved more successful, however.

Although he was detected before making his getaway, officials of the home refused to take him back. Instead they took him before Circuit Judge Hartmann, in Juvenile court.

To Judge Hartmann, Adolph explained his desire to leave the home. "Didn't he like his treatment there?" "You bet, Judge, they treated me fine," Adolph explained. "There was only one thing wrong. I wanted my dog 'Brownie,' and I ran away so I could be with him. And now they say I can't take him out there with me after I've gone after him three times." An official of the home explained to the Judge that the dog could not be admitted, whereupon Adolph declared he couldn't go back without "Brownie."

It was through the efforts of the Children's Aid society that Adolph has been placed with a private family, where "Brownie" also is welcome.

Henry VIII's Cruel Jest

When Bishop John Fisher, prisoner in London Tower, was made cardinal, Henry VIII is said to have remarked: "Paul may send him a hat, but I will leave him never a head to wear it."

When all the large sashes were put away, there still remained in the second wagon a number of quite small ones, which Jasper began to hand down.

"What's them for?" inquired Aunt Ailsie of Virginia.

"Some small windows we brought in, thinking that people who have none might like to set them in their walls to let in the light. We intend trading them for things to eat."

Aunt Ailsie sprang to her feet. "Hit's what I have needed all my lifetime, and never knowed it!" she said. "With one of them fine glass windows set in the south wall of old house, the sunball will shine in all day, and lighten all my labors. I'll fetch you in apples or beans or anything I got to pay for it."

"You'll fetch us in nothing more," replied Virginia. "We intended all along to give you one if you wanted it. Here, Jasper, knock off one of those crates and hand me a couple of those shashes. Aunt Ailsie can take them along on old Darb as she rides home."

Jasper knocked off the crate and Aunt Ailsie clasped the small shashes to her bosom in sheer delight. "Haint they love-ly!" she said, passing her hands over frame and glass.

Virginia took a stout piece of twine and tied the shashes together.

"I'll hand them, u to you," she said, "after you get on old Darb."

Aunt Ailsie stood silent for a long moment, not making any start toward the nag, her face growing more and more sober and thoughtful.

"Virginny," she said at last, "there's a time for all things, and this haint the time for to take home my glass window. Hit's this way. My man Lot, besides being the balkingest man ever drawed breath, is everly agin' new things and new ideas. If I was to ride up on old Darb and fla'nt these here shashes in his very face, hit would sartin be the everlasting end of glass window for me. To sudden him is pyore folly. What he needs is to get broke gradual to an idee, and kindly natchalized to it. So I aim to wrop it up in about four bundles of fodder and tie it up again' the rafters in this here cowshed loft of yourn, where nobody won't never see it, and then bide my time. You know the Scripter, "Continual drapping wears away a many stone," and "Times and agitations brings onlikely things to pass."

That same night in "old house," while Uncle Lot read Scripture and Aunt Ailsie washed dishes by fatpine light, Aunt Ailsie told of her visit to The Forks and the coming in of the two strange young women. "And Virginny she tried to give me 'n' you one of them leetle glass windows for a present; she allowed hit would serve us fine in yander south wall, and help you to read Scripter and me to weave and sech. She pressed me to fetch hit back o Old Darb. I told her I never had heard you spend your opinion on glass windows, but, being as you never was one to run after new things, and being as you and me had lived well without ary'n for forty-seven year, I allowed you would be again' it."

Uncle Lot looked up over his square silver specs in great surprise. "Isn't there a manager in town who can produce it?" "There isn't a manager in town who can even pronounce it," said Lackaye. Without any desire to take part in the controversy over the respective merits of the theatrical managers and the Key West sponge-fishers, I herewith submit, for what it may be worth, an incident which happened a few months ago in the office of a prominent producing manager, whose name is a household word in every actor's home. To him there came an experienced playwright bearing the script of a new piece which he had just finished.

"I don't want you should read it to me, now," said the manager. "Just tell me what it's like."

"Well," said the playwright, "it's a historical drama in five acts. I call it 'The Dauphin.'"

"For why do you call it that?" "Because it's based on the story of the Lost Dauphin."

"I don't want it," said the manager emphatically. "It wouldn't go. The public wouldn't never stand for a play about a fish."

"Well," said the playwright, "it's a historical drama in five acts. I call it 'The Dauphin.'"

"For why do you call it that?" "Because it's based on the story of the Lost Dauphin."

"I don't want it," said the manager emphatically. "It wouldn't go. The public wouldn't never stand for a play about a fish."

A friend spoke up:

"You never tuck hit?" he asked. "No. I thanked her kindly and come on along home."

"I gonnies!" he exclaimed in astonishment, "You done right. I wouldn't a-thought hit of you, tho. A glass window," he ruminated, "a glass window is about the last and leastest thing hit would enter my headpiece to crave. Haint I lived here sixty-six year in perfect peace without ary'n? And my good old maw and paw twenty year afore my day? I never was one to go back on my raising. What has sarved me and my forepayrents eighty-six year' will sarve me on to my end."

"I'm right proud you tuck that stand, Ailsie, and right surprised, too, the cyarnal mind in general, and yourn in p'ticlar, being prone to lust after every new thing hit sees. I remember me when Cynthy got her new cook stove, what a franzy you was in for one—and when Link fotched that air washboard up the branch for Rutheny, what a notion you tuck to have one, when you got the very finest battling-log and wash-trough in the country; and as for lamp-ile, if I'd give in to you, you'd have had us blowed to bits time out of mind. But hit pleasures me you use more judgment about a glass window. Hit shows my counsel haint been plumb throwed away."

Aunt Ailsie made no reply, but washed dishes diligently. Uncle Lot selected a fresh tick of pine from the basket at his side, lighted it at the expiring one, fixed it firmly in the chimney-jamb and, setting back in his chair and pushing up his specacles, suffered his gaze to roam about the big old room. In the north wall was the wide, open chimney in the east and west walls were doors, opening on front and back porches; but the south wall was solid, unbroken, its great, rounded, smooth logs apparently good for centuries to come.

"These here old walls," he resumed half in reverie, "was raised eighty-six year' gone by my paw when he fotched my maw in. His hands chopped and peeled and scribed and scored and hewed 'em, and helped to raise and notch 'em. And from that day they have looked down on the joys and sorrows the risings and settings, of a God-fearing generation."

"I sot my mind on you," continued Uncle Lot, "and when I had raised tother house yan side the old chimney here, I fotched you in. And again these old walls looked down on the joy of the bridegroom and the bride, and the waiters and kin all mustered at the infare. Then, afore long, they tuck another spell of seeing leetle feet pad about, and leetle hands explore cracks. And then, afore we knowed it, our offsprings was all fledged and out of the nest, and you and met left here to our lone.—But then I lift my eyes to these here old gray walls, that like well-tried friends, still stand staunch and true and pine-blank the same, and I feel stayed and upheld. I couldn't no more get my consent to lay violent hands on 'em and chop out a hole for a window, then if they was folks. Hit would be blasphemous!"

Very meekly Aunt Ailsie replied. "I allowed you would feel that way about it, paw." —Lucy Furman, in "The Glass Window."

Nothing Doing in the Fish Line

Some people insist that measuring class by class, the lowest order of human intelligence in America is found among Key West sponge fishers. Others hold that the group place at the foot of the column properly belongs to a certain order of theatrical producers. As proof of the value of their contention they point to the story of the theatrical manager, who, on being told that a play brought him by a certain dramatist was based upon one of Charles Dickens' novels, said:

"Well, you get hold of this fellow Dickens and bring him around to lunch tomorrow and we'll get his ideas and fix up a contract."

In the same connection there frequently is cited a remark by Wilton Lackaye who once expressed a desire, which he said he feared would never be gratified, to play the part of Jean Valjean in a stage adaptation of Hugo's Les Miserables. A friend spoke up:

AMUSEMENTS

A story of the storms and dangers of the New England coast, of a lifesaver and his battle to keep the record of his station clean, the ambition and love and even honor tempt him to forget that duty.

That's what one finds at the Metropolitan theater, where the Irvin Wilat-Paramount production, "Rugged Water," from the novel by that name by Joseph C. Lincoln, author of "Fair Harbor," "Savings," etc., is the feature.

"Rugged Water," one of the best selling novels this country has ever known, has lent itself to perfect screen adaptation. Featured in the leading roles of the picture are Lois Wilson, Warner Baxter, Wallace Beery and Phyllis Haver.

The scenes are laid in and about the Setucket Life Saving station on Cape Cod. Baxter, Number One man on the crew, is the logical successor to the position of the retiring captain, but a little red tape results in the appointment of an older man from a nearby station. The men do not take to him any too well, but Calvin Homer Baxter, who's heart and soul in the service puts every ounce of energy into serving his new chief and covering up the captain's blunders, for he has discovered that he is in love with Norma, Bartlett's daughter.

A storm comes up, and Captain Bartlett shows his true colors by refusing to send a boat out to a foundering ship. Homer stages a little mutiny and directs a thrilling rescue all, as Norma thinks, to better his own chances of replacing her father. There's a regular lover's misunderstanding, a broken engagement and a "different" climax that furnishes one of the biggest thrills the screen has ever known.

Speaking of realism, you can almost feel the spray when "Rugged Water" is on view.

Beery plays Captain Bartlett, Miss Wilson is his daughter Norma, and Phyllis Haver has the role of the village vamp who looks upon Baxter as a "catch" and manages to get herself engaged to him, he being a little back ward where ladies are concerned.

There's an ideal cast playing in support of the principals.

Providing a Clean Bill of Health

On a voyage back from France after hostilities had ended, one of the transports had aboard a negro labor battalion. Included among the returning veterans of the Brese docks was a crap shooter of mighty powers, originally from Memphis.

Off the banks the ship ran into nasty weather, and the gamster, frightfully seasick, lay in his bunk too miserable and too weak to move, and expecting each succeeding moment to be his last, as the craft stood first on end and then wallowed deep in the trough of the sea. As a matter of fact, the peril was real. The laboring steamer had blundered off her course and was dangerously near the shores of Newfoundland. Suddenly in the middle of the night a siren steam whistle at a lighthouse station on the mainland blared out, the sound rising above the roar of the wind. To the sufferer in bed down below, that appalling blast could mean but one thing—the trumpet call of judgment day.

He got down on his knees and prepared to uplift his voice in prayer for salvation. Then he remembered what he carried in his trousers pockets. He reached in his pocket and as he flung into space his educated ivory he cried out:

"Git away, evidences! Come on, Angel Gabriel!"

IT HAPPENED IN ENGLAND

A criminal was charged with murder. He was brought to trial, tried, convicted and sentenced to be hanged, all within an hour.

But it wasn't in Chicago. It wasn't in the United States at all. It was in England.

It may be an argument for severe punishment, for the death penalty for murder, and again it may not. Opinions differ on that score, for four states having the death penalty—at least two of them, New York and Illinois—have the greatest murder record. But it is an argument for swift punishment, whatever form that punishment takes.

The criminal fears speedy justice.—Evanston News-Index.

Silage Spoilage Easy to Prevent

Doors Should Be Fitted to Make Sure They Are Securely Airtight.

Much silage is wasted each year by molding or rotting. The presence of air is the cause of both.

Where wood-stave silos are in use the hoops should be tightened, the inside of the silo coated with creosote, and the outside painted, advises the New Jersey State College of Agriculture at New Brunswick. The doors should be examined and fitted to make sure that they are airtight, for they sometimes fall apart during the summer because of drying out.

Spoilage Traced to Air.

Where a silo is airtight and the silage continues to spoil it can still be traced to air that has not been excluded at filling time by sufficient tramping. If silage is cut too green, the possibilities are strong that there will be some rotting. If it is cut too dry, molding is probable because air cannot be excluded unless the silage is wet.

The proper stage for cutting the corn is after the kernel is dented, but before the milk dries up. If, for some unavoidable reason, the corn does get too dry before putting it into the silo, it is advisable to put a water hose inside of the blower, and in that way moisten the fodder.

A lack of sufficient tramping around the walls during filling is also a common cause of molding. Many dairymen attempt to economize by placing only one man in the silo when it is being filled. This is poor economy, as one man cannot keep the silage level and tramp it sufficiently. Thorough tramping, especially around the walls, will save much labor and useless waste next winter.

Spoiling on Top.

Some spoiling on top must be expected at first. A good method is to fill the last six or twelve inches with either weeds or dry fodder soaked with water. If nothing else is available, it is well to take off the ears and use merely the fodder on top, as it will spoil anyway. Unless this fodder is very green, water should be added through the blower. Some have found that oats, rye or wheat sown on top will sprout and thus form a desirable airtight mat.

Proper Care Increases

Life of Farm Tractor

Tractors, like horses, do not last long if they are neglected or abused. Some simple rules for increasing the life of these machines as well as for reducing their repair bills are offered by E. R. Gross, professor of rural engineering at the New Jersey State College of Agriculture.

1. Handle the tractor as though it could feel. This will avoid many broken or bent parts.

2. Do not race the motor except when it seems necessary. The governor is intended to protect the motor when under load. The operator must throttle it when it is running idle.

3. In almost all cases move slowly instead of by jerks. It is easier on the machine. This applies to shifting gears and operating the throttle and clutch.

4. Examine the machine throughout in order to detect any loose bolts. Tighten them before damage is done. This, with oiling and greasing, is as essential as the daily care given a work animal.

5. Motor repairs and adjustments such as taking up bearings, replacing piston rings, cleaning spark plugs, removing carbon, and the like, must be done eventually, but may be deferred if the tractor is carefully operated.

6. In addition to the daily care, give the tractor each winter a thorough cleaning with water to remove dirt, and with kerosene to remove grease. If it is needed, an overhauling should accompany the cleaning.

Heifer Calves Deserve

Attention of Dairymen

The heifer calf dropped this fall—the cow of two or three years hence—should be given a fair start now. Whole milk from its dam for the first week and from the herd for two or three weeks longer is almost essential. But as early as the third week of the calf's life it should be offered grain and hay so that it will not miss the fat of the milk when the change is made to skim milk. The change to skim milk should be made gradually. If whole milk is being sold and there is no skim milk available, powdered buttermilk diluted with nine parts water and fed at the same rate as skim milk is equally satisfactory.

Experimental work has proved the value of buttermilk for calf feeding, only where there is no skim milk available. Whole oats, cracked corn and bran make a good grain for the calf. Coarse alfalfa hay is preferable to leafy hay. A darkened shed will afford the calf protection from flies.

Cut Egg Crop Short

Overheated poultry houses hasten the molt and therefore cut the egg crop short. Rear ventilators over the roosts are essential for comfort. All doors and windows and ventilators should be kept open as much as possible. Summer drafts do not injure hens. Good egg production can be maintained by supplying, in addition to the grain, green succulent feed, as for example: Alfalfa pasture, finely chopped sudan grass or rape and a mash moistened with water or milk, together with cool roosting quarters.

NEW SITE

For Feeble Minded Institute Will Be Selected Before Feb- ruary First.

Columbus, Jan. 13.—U(P).—Governor Vic Donahey today definitely assured Mrs. Francis E. Gould, Cleveland, that the Northern Ohio site for the new state institution for feeble minded will be selected before Feb. 1 and that construction work on the project will start without delay.

Mrs. Gould called on the governor late yesterday and presented a petition signed by 15,000 club women, urging work on the proposed institution be expedited. The petition stressed the fact that the $500,000 appropriation made by the last legislature for the institution, should not be allowed to lapse.

The advisory committee appointed by Governor Donahey to select a site, still was without any definite plans today. The committee is co-operating with State Welfare Director Harper.

Numerous cities are bidding for the institution. The advisory committee recently rejected the Grafton farm site because of the lack of an adequate water supply.

"Elements"

The term element was first given its modern meaning by Robert Boyle, an English scientist, who lived from 1627 to 1691. Certain of the elements, however, were known to the ancient alchemists, but their conception was not clear.

LIABILITY INSURANCE

What It Is and the Benefits That Accrue to the Policy Holders.

I wonder if you realize that every car owner is responsible to the public for the operation of his car, whether he drives it himself or allows others to drive it.

PUBLIC LIABILITY is an insurance term indicating the responsibility the car owner is under for injuries or death inflicted on persons thru the operation of his car.

It is most important of all automobile insurance features, owing to the unknown possibilities of the claims.

Some of the factors making accidents and consequent liability claims daily more numerous, and the owner's risk in operating a car an ever increasing one, are:

CONGESTION OF TRAFFIC. Roads are about the same width as formerly, yet traffic thereon has greatly increased. Between fifteen and twenty million motor vehicles are registered in the United States today. This vast number is being increased daily.

LOW PRICES OF SECOND-HAND CARS have added greatly to the number of irresponsible drivers, who menace all other users of the roads. The careful, sane driver is often the sufferer from the faults of others.

IMPROVED HIGHWAYS are a constant temptation to speedsters and encourage less careful attention on the part of all drivers.

THE CHILDREN MUST PLAY, and there being very little yard space around the average city home, the playing is done in the path of the motorists. The heavy tolls of 1924 in life, injuries and property losses have been given wide publicity in the press of the country.

AMBULANCE-CHASING LAWYERS (and there is one or more in every city) make a business of creating cases against any car owner involved in an accident, whether or not it is serious, whether or not he is liable and particularly if he has property.

COURT CHARGES AND ATTORNEY'S FEES MUST BE PAID, and eventually, possibly a heavy judgment to be paid with interest and costs. The feelings, sympathies and judgments of juries are generally in favor of the injured and against the car owner. Verdicts for injuries or death run into thousands of dollars, and are larger than ever before. Even if you win, your expenses mount to a large figure.

An automobile liability guarantees the investigation of claims whether you are liable or not, adjusts, pays, fights your case if necessary, pays expenses, lawyer's fees and court costs, relieves you from responsibility and worry. It does all of this for the owner and for any one legally operating the car with the owner's permission.

If you are now carrying liability insurance, the above facts will serve to strengthen the conviction that led you to protect yourself.

This information, coupled with the fact that last year no fewer than twenty-eight states introduced bills for compulsory liability insurance, is conclusive evidence of the advisability of every car owner relieving himself of personal liability.

The Leaning Tower of Baltimore

In Baltimore, years ago, there was a shot tower that stood up in the air to a considerable height. Almost at the base of the shot tower a serious-minded German ran a saloon.

Eugene Havez, afterwards a New York theatrical man and now in the moving picture business in California, lived in Baltimore when the shot tower stood there. One day Havez and a friend of his found themselves in the vicinity of the shotworks. Both were thirsty and both, as it happened, without funds. Havez had an idea.

He outlined it to his companion and then they entered the saloon in a violent argument with each other. "I'll bet you anything I'm right," Havez declared.

"You're wrong," stated his friend stubbornly, "you're just naturally bound to be wrong."

They lined up at the bar still debating. The German waiting patiently to serve them became interested.

"I'll show you how game I am," said Havez. "I'll bet you the drinks I'm right and leave it to our friend here to decide it."

"That's a go," said the other man. "Set out the drinks," commanded Havez.

The German served them and they drank.

"Now, boys," inquired the saloon man, "vat is dis bet?"

"It's like this," said Havez edging toward the door, "my friend here bets that when the shot tower falls down it will fall to the north. I say it will fall to the south."

PATIENTLY AWAIT
ANOTHER MIRACLE

But Missionaries in Bagdad Have Hopes.

A delightful story comes from the Christian medical missions in Bagdad to the Youth's Companion. In the lovely date-palm gardens of the city a thief was discovered, not long ago, robbing one of the trees of its luscious fruit. The owner, a hasty, passionate man, promptly shot him, and the man fell from the top of a lofty palm to the ground. He was hurried away to the Christian hospital, with a bullet in his body, a broken arm and a shattered leg. On his way he begged to be put beneath a Moslem roof, even if it were a prison, rather than be left in the clutches of dogs of Christians. But, as he was a criminal, his captors paid no attention to his wishes.

At the hospital they speedily put him under an anesthetic, extracted the bullet, set his broken limbs, and before long he was comfortably settled on a palm-fabric cot, trussed up with dressings, but alive and likely to get well. For a long time he was very suspicious and surly and would have little to say to the missionary whenever he attempted to converse with him. But gradually he yielded to the kind treatment he received and one day he astonished the missionary with the remark: "This is a miracle! It's a place of miracles!"

"We deal," replied the missionary, with much more difficult cases than yours, Ibrahim. You should see some of them."

"Ah! That is not my meaning," replied the man. "As I have been lying here I have seen rich men come to the door of this hospital and offer jewels even to half their wealth to the surgeon to come and attend their wives and children; but always he says, 'The poor must come first'; and he who might be so rich slaves here in the heat night and day for wretches like me, who can give them nothing. That is a miracle!"

Indeed, so touched was Ibrahim by the loving sacrifice of his new friends that he simply had to be turned away from the hospital when he was recovered.

"But what can I do for you, sir?" he begged. "Is there nothing I can do?"

"Yes," replied the surgeon, "send me some more patients."

"Allah!" cried Ibrahim. "Here is a man who might have all the world if he asked for it, and all he wants is more work. You are a miracle, sir! But I will do something for you. Do you like dates, sir?"

"Yes, I like dates," said the surgeon, smiling.

"Then, sir, let me know when you want some, and I'll always steal them for you!"

The missionary and the surgeon shook their heads over their patient, as he left them, and one remarked to the other, "Another miracle is wanted there, but evidently we've made some impression. Let us have hope that the rest will come in time."

TRAIN SINKS IN GUMBO, FIND OIL

Drilling Crew, Forced to Unload, Makes Strike.

Dallas, Texas.—The opening up of Reagan county, Texas, as a great oil-producing area has furnished one of the most interesting chapters in the history of oil-field developments in this country.

A year or so ago a party of Texas business men obtained from the state authorities leases on many square miles of prairie lands in that county for the purpose of exploiting the acreage for oil. The leases in question were located about 150 miles from the nearest oil production.

After the company had sold stock for about 20 cents a share and raised more money by the formation of an allied organization to which a considerable acreage was assigned the work of drilling a test well in this wildcat territory was undertaken.

A railroad that has been in the hands of receivers for a long time passed through a large section of this property. Believing the railroad was in a hopeless condition, the receivers had petitioned the state authorities for consent to abandon the property, which was in reality a streak of rust, and to sell the rails and other assets as junk. The state railroad commission declined to grant the request.

After loading up several flat cars with derrick timber, casings and other material necessary to drill an oil well, the Pioneer Oil company of Reagan county directed the railroad officials to convey the material to a point along the broken down railroad, from which point the drilling material was to be hauled some miles by horses to a place where it was considered most desirable to start the test well.

After the drilling material had been transported about fifty miles from the loading point the rails began to settle and finally the weight of the locomotive and freight cars caused the roadway to sink in Texas gumbo, to the depth of several feet.

Being unable to proceed any farther, the drilling material was unloaded and it was then and there decided to drill on the spot. The well came in a large high-gravity producer. It opened up what is now considered the most promising light oil field in Texas.

NO WONDER

Girl's Legs Look Good As Stocking Bill Is $345,000,000.

Five hundred dollars for a pair of stockings. Cheaper grades at $250 and $100 a pair. These are the prices on regular stock displayed in a Fifth Avenue store in New York City. Yet they account for but a small part of the $345,000,000 which the women of the United States pay yearly for their silk stockings.

A girl getting a weekly wage of $22.50 buys a pair of silk stockings every pay day at a cost of $1.75 or $1.59 according to whether or not she strikes a bargain sale—and considers herself economical. She may have to cut her luncheon money but not her expenditure for stockings.

Recently the proprietor of a cotton mill in Rhode Island employing thousands of women conducted a survey and found that 68 per cent of his employees were not wearing a stitch of cotton—their stockings, knickers and printed frocks were all silk.

These are only a few of the startling facts regarding the craze for silk garments reported in an article in this week's Liberty. Included among them is the following amusing incident:

The president of a huge silk concern stepped out of his private car with some friends at a watertank down in West Virginia. They wanted a breath of air and had ten minutes to get it. Green hills rich with coal rose precipitously all about them.

About as far up one of the hillsides as this merchant could have driven a golf ball, the daughter of a coal miner was to be seen milking a cow that was tied to the unpainted fence palings that formed their back yard.

"I'd like to bet you, gentlemen," proposed the silk manufacturer, "that your milkmaid wears silk stockings."

"Taken for a hundred," eagerly snapped one of his party, "and you don't have to pay me if she is wearing any kind of stockings. Likely enough she's barefooted."

They climbed the hill, wheezing painfully, and presently stood beside the young woman. Seemingly they were interested in the cow. The girl smiled at them but kept on milking.

They did not have to question her. Her silk stockings were clasping the milk pail and even the rolled down tops were of silk.

Scars of a Veteran

It is only a question of time, anyway, and a certain feeling of quiet and care-free contentment attaches to owning an automobile with all four fenders already thoroughly bunged up. —Columbus State Journal.

A BACK YARD
SILKWORM FARM

Thousands of school children in the United States owe their first hand knowledge of the industrious silk-worm to T. A. Keleher, an amateur entomologist of Washington, D. C., who for 26 years has been experimenting with silk-worm culture in his own back yard. On half a dozen mulberry trees he raises from 10,000 to 20,000 of the creatures a year, says Popular Science Monthly, distributing them among schools as living exhibits. Every cocoon contains from 750 to 1,000 yards of silk.

TIRE MAKERS WILL INVEST $50,000,000

In Production of Crude Rubber in the Next Five Years.

New York, Jan. 13.—(UP.)—
More than $50,000,000 will be thrown into production of crude rubber in the next five years by large manufacturers in this country, in a desperate effort to break
the British monopoly.

This sum will be in addition to the $100,000,000 that Harvey S.
Firestone, president of the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. has announced he will spend in Liberia,
expecting eventually to have one
million acres of rubber trees
which would produce annually
250,000 tons of rubber.

Following a conference with
Secretary of Commerce Hoover
yesterday, several organizations
were formed "to protect the American public and the rubber
industry, with respect to future
supplies."

The organizations, The Rubber Association of America and
the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, intend to spend $10,000,000 a year for the planting of rubber trees in areas under American control, or where favorable conditions could be assured.

Concurrently with the plantation development plans, earnest
consideration will be given to stimulating greater production of wild rubber, particularly in Brazil, in order to alleviate the
immediate situation, it was stated
after the conference.

That private interests in the industry, believed to be the large automobile manufacturers, are working on plans for plantation
development on a large scale, also was brought out at the discussion with Hoover, it was learned.

A. L. Viles, general manager of the Rubber Association of America, declared the two most favorable points selected for growing
rubber trees were the Philippines
and Sumatra under Dutch
control.

Birth Rate Is Lowest in History of Nation

New York.—The birth rate in America is now lower than at any other period of her history and, due to the increasing practice of birth control, the finest qualities of the race are in danger of being lost.
These are the conclusions of Dr.
Frederick L. Hoffman, statistician,
drawn from his research work for the Prudential Insurance company. About
the only encouragement he finds is that the death rate is the lowest ever
known, with one exception. He places
the annual number of births in this country as about 2,600,000 and the deaths as 1,300,000.

"The question of birth control would admit of no discussion," he says in his report, "if the decrease in the birth rate affected exclusively the undesirable elements of the population.
However, the reduction in births applies largely to those who are intellectually as well as morally and economically of the superior type."

"If there is anything in the theory
of the hereditary transmission of fine
qualities, it must be apparent that we are deliberately encouraging
diminution of pronounced types of intelligence and character upon which
the nation must rely for its direction
and guidance."

Find Treasure Ship

Moscow.—Near the scene of the charge of the Light brigade divers have located a treasure ship 40 feet below the surface of the Black sea. It is the hulk of the Black Prince, which went down with $25,000 in gold and silver intended for payment of allied armies in the Crimean war.

Homeseecker—How much did you say this house is which you want to sell me?

Agent—I am instructed to let it go for $18,500, and it's a bargain.

Homeseecker—Haven't you got the decimal point in the wrong place. It looks to me to be worth just about $18.50. Good-by.—Pathfinder.
